

DETECTING THE ORIENTATION OF CARBON NANOTUBES

Abstract of the Disclosure

Carbon nanotube orientation may be detected by exposing the carbon nanotube to a pair of laser beams oriented transversely to one another. By observing the 5 effect on the intensity of transmitted light from a first laser beam when the polarization of the second laser beam is changed, the carbon nanotube orientation can be derived.